"GOING, GOING, GONE," GENTLEMAN TO DISPOSE OF ACRE OR SO OF AUTOS

Ulster Dealers, Besides 100 of Latest Models, Will Have at Exposition Unlimited Selections For Those Who Like Their Cars Well Tested.

Kingston automobile dealers are going in the big Kingston Industrial Exhibition August 27 to September 1, with everything they have, from $10,000 gold plated limousine to very much and badly used flyvers. The new cars, to the number of more than 100, will be shown in tents and the used cars will be parked outside and an auction held, with brass band music, barkers and an auctioneer with a megaphone voice. This feature alone will attract crowds, as it will be the biggest display of automobiles ever seen in Kingston.

This was decided by the Kingston Automotive Dealers Thursday night on the back porch of Mr. Pessenar's cottage after they had surrounded shore dinner in High Point Lodge and made the dinner look like wreck of its former self. During the business meeting the president smoked many cigarettes and the discussion so heated the surrounding atmosphere that, although the earlier evening had been almost frosty, Mr. Pessenar had to come down and turn on the electric fans.

DEMONSTRATION OF WANDERS AWAY, LIFE SAVING AT "Y" WANDERS BACK

On Monday night at 8 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium there will be a demonstration of life saving and resuscitation by a regular organized group of Red Cross life savers.

During the past three years the American Red Cross has developed most efficiently the technique for teaching the average man how to rescue a drowning person. They have devoted a good share of their finances to the organizing of volunteer life saving crews throughout the nation.

The crew that will be present Monday night was organized by Commodore Longfellow of the American Red Cross. This group will give a demonstration how to break the various holds that a drowning person uses on his would be rescuer. Also practical demonstration to be given in the water of how after breaking the holds to get the body to the shore, and the first aid treatment given while waiting for the doctor.

Since Sunday noon the police department and Superintendent Kinnison of the City Home have been conducting a quiet search for Peter Finlan, aged about 75 years, an inmate at that institution, who wandered away at that time.

Thursday afternoon Peter showed up at the City Home and in reply to questions of Superintendent Edmondson stated that he had been visiting relatives in Jersey.

Owing to his advanced age it was feared at first that he might have fallen into the Hudson river or Raritan creek and drowned. Since it was learned that he had been spending the nights with a family on Penckhookie street, and the day wandering around that section.

Thursday afternoon Mr. Finlan

This exhibition will be open to the public.

Mr. Miller, the physical director of the local association, is planning to organize a volunteer Red Cross life-saving crew in the city during August, and this will be a fine opportunity for any young men or older boys to definitely see the type of work that is required. This demonstration will be under the auspices of the Boys' Division of the Central Y. M. C. A.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

JOLLY DUST BROTHERS

"You remember the Jolly Dust Brothers?" asked Daddy.

"Oh yes," said Nick, and Nancy added:

"Indeed I do, Daddy. They were the ones who were made so happy by people complaining over the dust coming back as soon as it was dusted off."

"The very same," said Daddy.

"Well," he continued, "the other day they were up to all their pranks. They had been having a very good time. In the winter time the heat made them collect members of the family together and have little parties which caused people to have to dust even in the winter when there was no dust from roads."

"But now that it was summer they were having the best of good times. They had to go up their summer residence along a road, by the side of which were a number of houses. And the Jolly Dust Brothers led the fun."

"Of course they were attending to things all about but it was here that they decided to spend most of their vacation."

"It's dreadful," said the people. "Of course on the ground floor the dust comes in from the road, but even on the second floor and in the garret the dust seems to be just as bad."

"Where in the world does all the dust come from? No sooner do we get it all dusted nice and clean than everything is dusty again."

"It really is strange to think how dust just keeps coming and coming, from nowhere, it would often seem."

"Now that rejoiced the Jolly Dust Brothers. And they paid great attention to the upstairs rooms for they thought it was such fun to puzzle the people. The people expected to find dust downstairs and so the Jolly Dust Brothers gave them what they expected but they also gave them the puzzle to work out of where the dust came from upstairs, which they were not able to do at all."

"The Brothers played, too, with the wind. One day Mr. Wind got hold of an old newspaper which had been left on the roof and he started blowing it about and then he began to blow it off the roof so it would fall down to the ground."

"Now the Jolly Dust Brothers thought this was very interesting to see what Mr. Wind could do and they got together and all agreed they would give Mr. Wind a treat."

"Mr. Wind," they said, "you have always been a good friend of ours, and we want to invite you to our headquarters."

"Headquarters?" asked Mr. Wind.

"Yes," said the Jolly Dust Brothers, "for you know we have to have a main place for headquarters as we make our homes in so many different places, for different lengths of time at a time."

"Sometimes we stay in one place a long time and again not so long. And often we go straight from one place to another. But we have to have headquarters where we can meet each other and hear of the good work that is being done and of the rude speeches made about us which make us laugh. Oh yes, they make us laugh."

"Why," said Mr. Wind, "I'd be delighted to go to your headquarters."

"So the Jolly Dust Brothers led the way and finally Mr. Wind found himself in the most enormous old building he had ever seen, surrounded by miles and miles of country which seemed to be the grounds of the building."

"Of course," said the Jolly Dust Brothers, "we have many branches of headquarters all over the earth, but this is the head place of all. Look about you!"

"And Mr. Wind did. Everywhere there were packages of dust, and trunks and boxes and barrels and packages of dust. And so there were all over the ground too."

"Mr. Wind also noticed that there were all sorts of signs about. One read, over a large section where there were many packages:

"Dust collected from deserted houses."

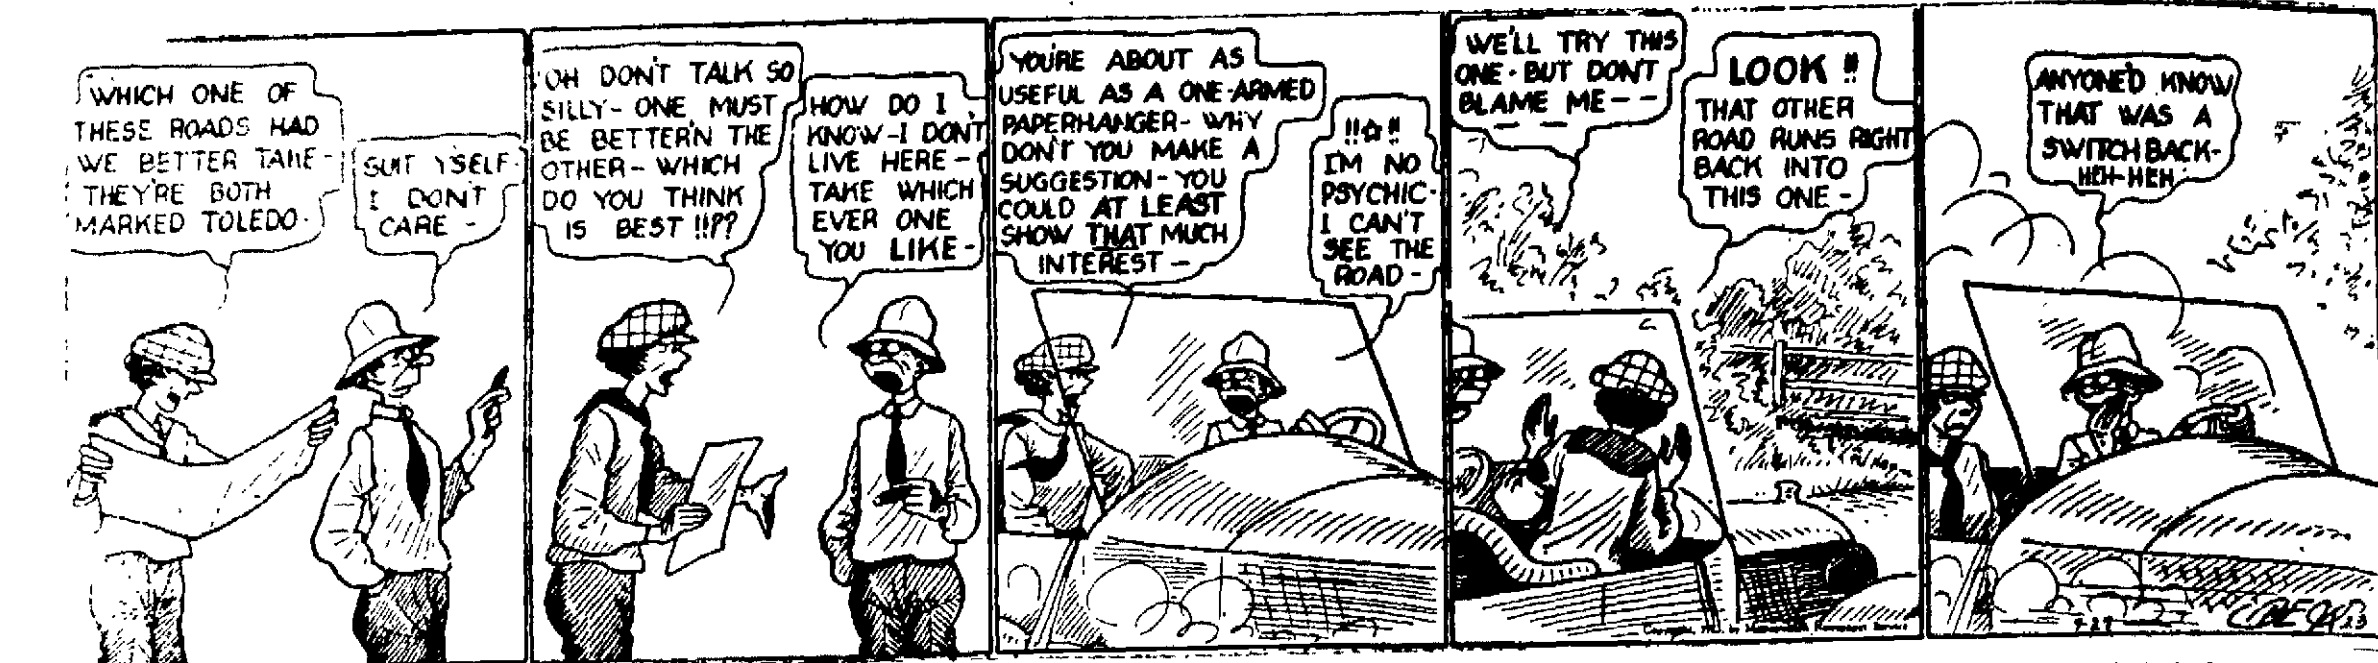

"But the biggest section of all—oh, it was more than an enormous room and it reached way, way out into the grounds—had over it a sign which read:

"Dust saved from housecleanings."

"You see," the Jolly Dust Brothers explained, "we save all dust that is thrown away, so we never run low on dust. That's how we do it! And that's where all the dust comes from—our wonderful, wonderful storehouses of dust."

"And Mr. Wind agreed that the Jolly Dust Brothers had good ideas, looking at them from their point of view!"

The KITCHEN CABINET

(By 1213 Western Newspaper Union)

When you become so absorbed in the world of things, and in the accumulation of things that you forget to be considerate, courteous and kind, you are not worth a cent to anybody.

THINGS WORTH REMEMBERING

Use a pint or more of bread crumbs with a cupful of corn meal to make steamed brown bread; the shortening, sugar, egg and salt may be added with a few raisins to suit the taste. Steam or cook in a fireless cooker for several hours.

A little grated fresh potato added to the chocolate cake batter will make a cake that will keep moist and still not alter the flavor or texture.

This is the time of the year when a few things started for the Christmas boxes may be done while sitting on the porch; having more than one article going relieves the monotony, and before one knows it several gifts are all ready to pack.

Shine can be easily removed from garments by rubbing lightly with a piece of emery cloth or paper.

Sit a thimble over the end of the small curtain rods when running them through the curtain hems. This will save many a tear in the material of the curtain.

A handful of salt added to vegetable skins that are burned in the furnace will destroy all odor.

Salt sprinkled into the oven when fruit or custard pies boil over will destroy the unpleasant odor of burned milk.

An occasional rubbing of strong salt water or moist salt into the scalp is good to prevent falling hair.

A pinch of salt added to the pot of coffee brings out the flavor of the coffee.

Salt added to the water in a vase of flowers will keep them fresh much longer than fresh water.

When making fruit cake, it is much more delicate of flavor and keeps moist longer if steamed an hour or two and baked a short time.

Bottles that have become discolored may be cleaned by adding a tablespoonful of vinegar and a few tacks or shot, to shake and remove all deposit. Then wash with hot soap suds and the bottles will be bright and clear.

Line will cover scratches on mahogany furniture.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 27, 1923.

The straw polls indicate that no considerable part of the American public is disposed to take Henry Ford to its bosom, but usually the American public is apt to regard with suspicion and something like fear a man who nets over fifty millions a year in profits, and such an attitude toward the popular motor-car maker may yet show itself.

Old Moslem standpoints are said to be dolefully predicting the end of the world because Turkish women are now allowed to appear in public without veils, are admitted to the leading university and are even allowed to enter the Turkish medical college in Constantinople as students. Certainly all this is an amazing change from the conditions in old Stamboul depicted by Pierre Loti in his novel, "Disenchanted."

British women who undertook men's work during the war seem to have held on to it in much larger numbers than the American women who similarly adventured. It is stated that in the single English county of Surrey there are now three undertakers, three architects, a lock-keeper, a tractor driver, a veterinary surgeon, a wireless operator, a piano tuner, a plumber, a wheelwright, two gravestone sculptors, four blacksmiths and 186 farmers—all women.

When in the heyday of his glory the former Kaiser deluded to play a game card etiquette required that he be allowed to win in every case. The Prince of Wales, on the other hand, cheerfully takes any beating in games or sports that may happen to come his way. As for the President, it is stated that "the idea of purposely losing to him on the golf links or in a game of poker enters nobody's head." Such is the difference between defunct autocracy and surviving democracy.

General Pershing suggests that men who have served in the summer citizens' training camps should wear a button or other insignia, and that clubs should be formed to stimulate interest in the camps. The idea is a good one. In these days of enforced national economy, the chief reliance for the country's defense must be placed on our army of trained civilians. The Regular Army has been cut out only the skeleton of the force necessary in time of war. In an emergency our young men must be prepared to fill out the ranks of the military units and take their places at the front with the least possible delay. The loss of precious weeks spent in training the men for the World War must never be permitted to recur.

THE RUDE OLD TIMES.

Inquiry into the life and conditions surrounding Andrew Jackson tends to give a modern reader the impression that the "good old times" were, in fact, the rude, the crude and hard old times, with vast inferiority of conditions of living compared with those of the present, and with nothing more to be desired than we now enjoy except in the matter of personal liberty and perhaps in some features of a simple life of less intellectual complexity and more definite moral standards.

That the "good old times" were largely mythical in a long established civilization such as that of England as well as in pioneer America is clearly indicated by the recollections of the mother of Lord Haldane, now in her ninety-ninth year. The memory of this aged English gentlewoman reaches all the way back to the days when railroads were a new and doubtful wonder, when executed criminals hung by chains from gibbets at crossroads, when bleeding was the roping physician's cure-all, when school boys were regularly and brutally flogged, when the poor and lowly received scant consideration from the rich or otherwise high and mighty, and when the rotten borough system cursed the politics of England. Writing of her youth, the aged mother of Lord Haldane says:

Young as I was, I was impressed in the 1760s by the overbearing manner of the higher classes and the unnecessary display of wealth and power. The floodgates opened for the first time in 1822, and never since has the current been stopped. Then only three professions were considered fit for gentlemen—the church, the bar and the army. It cost 500 pounds sterling to get one's son into a good regiment. The conditions of the working classes in contrast and southern England were deplorable. The agricultural laborer had to support his family on nine shillings a week, including rent for the cottage, which was probably not a very sanitary one. Those imprisoned for debt were in a terrible plight.

Ninety years ago even good people did not realize what was due those less fortunate than themselves, and serious abuses existed with little protest. I am glad to know and testify that, on the whole, changes during the last century have all been for the better.

Looking back over the long trail of her 99 years this intelligent and open-minded English gentlewoman sees successive conditions in their true outlines. She is not deceived, as are many other elderly people when looking back toward the "good old times"—unreflecting persons who fail to realize that it is not the past conditions they would bring back, but only the vigor, the freshness, the enthusiasm and the joys of their lost youth.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Please tell me the real name of the queer long winged bugs that go by the name of mole killers, pear horses, sooth sayers, etc. Do they really kill any animals?

You refer to a carnivorous member of the orthoptera, the so-called "Praying Mantids," found both in Europe and America. The folded posture of the front legs gave the "praying" part of their name. They are NOT poisonous and eat only insects, doing much good for agriculture.

2. Can you explain why the eastern bean has a funny little lump at the end of the seed?

We can't say why, but can tell you the lump has a name, caruncle, and that it is a spongy nature, and that it helps absorb moisture, so that the parts of the plant and the plant food inside the seed shell, swell and crack off the hard outer coating.

3. Is cuttlebone a real bone, and why do they give it to canaries?

Not bone, but the internal shell of a mollusc, a marine animal swimming near shore. Sepia officinalis. Linny in character, and when stripped of animal tissue and dried, offers a convenient form of giving lime in small doses to the canary. Also, caged birds need something to grind their beaks on, to keep them normal, as the beak is something like the toenails and grows too long if not constantly worn down by use.

ROAD BUILDING

Survey Shows Good Road Soon Repays Its Cost

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

A good road is such a paying investment that it is the poorest kind of business judgment to do without it, according to the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. The bureau produces figures based upon a survey of traffic in Connecticut to prove its contention. An actual count of the traffic on the Boston post road showed that the average weight of vehicles and commodities passing over the road in nine hours each day was 1,140 tons. Adding one-third as a conservative estimate for the full day increases the weight to 1,620 gross tons daily.

Experiments made at the Iowa experiment station show that with gasoline at 25 cents a gallon the cost of moving this tonnage over a dirt road would have been $26.44 a mile, assuming the impossible, that such traffic could be carried over a dirt road. The cost of fuel for moving the same tonnage over a paved road would be $11.70, a difference of $14.74 a day. On the basis of 300 days a year the actual saving in fuel alone for moving this tonnage would be $4,422. If the paved highway costs $40,000 a mile, the average interest at 6 per cent would be $1,000 a year, which, deducted from the saving on fuel, would leave a balance which would retire the cost of the road in less than 12 years.

This calculation does not take into account other savings in the cost of operating commercial vehicles or value of the heavy movement of passenger vehicles.

In less developed rural sections the value of the gasoline saved is reduced in proportion to the lighter travel, but the cost of the roads is correspondingly reduced, and there is no doubt that an analysis and comparison of the highway costs and the vehicle operating cost in any particular case will demonstrate the economy of improvement wherever the traffic is sufficient to call for any improvement at all.

Bituminous Material Is Useful for Road Surface

Application of bituminous material may be made successfully on any farm road which has already been constructed of stone, gravel or other similar material, and is in a thoroughly compacted and reasonably smooth condition. A coat of preparation applied cold, or an asphaltic oil, can be used and if applied by the farm employees, the cost should not exceed 7 or 8 cents a square yard for materials.

The compacted gravel or stone road should be thoroughly cleaned of dust and the bitumen applied with ordinary sprinkling pots from which the perforated nozzle has been removed and the spout carefully flattened into a symmetrical rectangular opening about one-quarter of an inch wide, so that the material may be poured in a broad, flat stream.

If a large amount of work is to be done, a specially designed pouring can may be purchased of dealers in road equipment. Care should be taken to have an even distribution, and the quantity applied should be approximately one-half gallon to a square yard of road surface. After applying the bituminous material, clean gravel or stone chips should be spread evenly over the surface, and if possible, rolled with a saw or field roller. Where gravel or chips are not available, clean, coarse sand will serve as covering material. It should be spread in sufficient quantity to prevent the bituminous material from adhering to tires of passing vehicles.

This treatment should not be made where drainage from the stables or barns will flow over it. Where mud-holes are likely to form around hitching posts or at stable entrances, if a more durable pavement is desired, a section of concrete slab should be laid.

Information Sought on Strength of Hard Roads

Actual stresses in concrete road slabs and subgrade conditions beneath are to be investigated in many states by the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. A truck is now being equipped with suitable apparatus, including graphic strain gauges and an autographic deflectometer especially developed for the purpose. Data to be collected will include soil and moisture condition of the subgrade, design of slab, direction and magnitude of stresses, and deflection of slab under legal limit of loadings as well as other loadings.

Some of the southern states will be visited first. Valuable information should be secured as to the strength of different types of design.

Good Time for Weeding After Heavy Drenching

In a small flower or vegetable garden there is no better method to remove weeds than pulling them after a heavy rain or a thorough drenching. They will leave the soil much more readily than when it is dry and hard. If the weeds are cut or pulled when the earth is hard, it leaves a lot of the little roots in the earth, and most of the weeds are so hard that it does not require much trouble to get a fresh start.

ORIGIN of the NAMES of the STATES

PART I

Presented by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.

To all Americans the origin of the names of our states should prove an interesting subject, and from it no small amount of history and geography may be learned. It is, however, a more complicated subject to trace than the origin of the nomenclature of European states, which, for the most part, bear names derived simply from the ancient tribes by which they were formerly inhabited.

Of our 48 states, we find that 25 bear names of Indian origin, while 12 are English, six Spanish, three French, and two bear names that must be considered from a historical standpoint, American.

Considering the states with English names first, the origin of most of these will be familiar to us from our studies in American colonial history. The first of these is New Hampshire, the original territory of which was conveyed by a patent of the Plymouth company to John Mason in 1629 and named by him for the English county of Hampshire.

When the Dutch navigator Adrian Block sailed into Narragansett bay, about 1614, he encountered an island of fiery aspect, due to the red clay in some portions of its shores. He called it Roode Eylandt (Red Island), and the surrounding country received its name from that of the island. The English settlers, who, with Roger Williams at their head, received a charter for this region from the English Crown in 1644, Anglicized the name, making it Rhode Island. There is a theory, also, that our small state was named after the island of Rhodes, in the Mediterranean, but it is difficult to substantiate this claim, as the two localities in no way resemble one another.

The Empire State, New York, as is well known, was originally called New Netherlands, while the city was known as New Amsterdam. But when the colony was taken over by the English in 1664, the names of both were changed to New York, not, as might be supposed, after the city of York, England, but in honor of Charles II's brother, the Duke of York, afterward James II of England, to whom the grant was made.

The duke, in turn, transferred the southern portion of his grant to Sir George Carteret, who settled there and named the country after the Channel Isle of Jersey, which place he had bravely defended against the parliamentary forces in the English Civil war.

Only One Named for Its Founder.—Charles II of England, the "Merry Monarch," spent so much of his country's funds on pleasure that state debts often remained unpaid. One of these was for salary to one Sir William Penn, one of the lords of the admiralty, who, on his death, bequeathed the claim, which amounted to some 16,000 pounds, to his son, William Penn, a Quaker. The latter agreed to accept a land grant from the crown in exchange for the debt.

Penn wanted to call this land "Sylvania" on account of its vast forests, but the king insisted that the founder's name be incorporated in that of the colony, and thus it is as Pennsylvania, literally "Penn's woods," that the Keystone state is known to us today. It is the only state named for its founder.

Our second smallest state, Delaware, bears the name of Lord de la Warr, first governor and captain-general of Virginia, who in 1630 went on an exploring expedition in the bay and river after which the state is named.

The first English Roman Catholic settlement in America was made in Maryland, in 1634, and this colony, by the way, was the first to extend religious toleration to all. It was named after the queen of Charles I, Henrietta Maria, who was the daughter of Henry of Navarre and was of the Roman Catholic faith.

The strong tendency of the earlier English settlers to perpetuate English royal names in their settlements is indicative of their loyalty to the crown and is further illustrated in the names of the Virginias, the Carolinas and Georgia.

The first of these was named by Sir Walter Raleigh for Elizabeth, the Virgin Queen, who was on the throne of England when the first settlements were attempted, in 1585.

When the state of West Virginia was formed, in 1863, it was first proposed to call it "Kanawha," after one of its rivers, and much regret has been voiced that this fine old Indian name was not adopted.

Confusion About the Carolinas.—There has been some confusion as to which King Charles the Carolinas were named for. In 1660 Jean Ribault, a French explorer, named this region after Charles IX of France. The name, however, did not come into general use and for a time disappeared. About 1690 the country was turned to as Carolina in some English state papers, and it was considered to have been so named after Charles I of England, but it was not until 1693 that the name Carolina was definitely applied to this section by the lords proprietor, who had received a grant to the land from Charles II and who named the country in his honor.

Georgia was named by and for King George II of England, and the colony was referred to under this name in the charter which that monarch granted to General Oglethorpe, the founder, in 1732.

Of the three states bearing French names, the origin of one is doubtful. This small number is out of proportion to the extent of French explorations, evidence of which can be gained from the trail of French place-names from the mouth of the St. Lawrence to New Orleans.

Vermont was first explored by Samuel de Champlain in 1609 and was so named by him after its Green Mountains (Vert Mont), which are the dominating natural feature of the state.

The generally accepted version of the origin of the name of Maine is that it was so called by some early French explorers after the French province of that name, wherein was located the private estate of Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I of England.

There is another meaning ascribed to the name, fairly well supported by authorities. According to this version, the fishermen on the islands along the coast of Maine always referred to that region as the "Mayn land," and in support of this theory we find the colony referred to in a grant of Charles I to Sir Fernando Gorges in 1630 as "the province or county of Mayne."

Louisiana for Louis XIV.—The third state name of French origin is that of Louisiana, so called in honor of Louis XIV. The name was first applied in 1683 by the daring French explorer, La Salle, who employed it to indicate the vast territory watered by the Mississippi and its tributaries.

Permanent Spanish settlements within the present boundaries of the United States were made earlier than those of any other country and they were numerous. As a result, we have six states bearing names of Spanish origin, and in them and their neighbors we find a large number of town and county names from this tongue.

The first state to bear a Spanish name was Florida, which was discovered by Ponce de Leon on Easter Sunday, 1512. Two theories exist regarding the origin of the name. One refers to the Spanish term, Pascua Florida (Easter Sunday—literally, "Feast of the Flowers"), having reference to the flowers with which the churches in Spain are decorated on that day. In view of the day, on which the discovery was made, this is probably the correct explanation of the origin.

The second theory is that Ponce de Leon simply used the word "Florida," meaning "flowery," from the aspect of the country.

The other Spanish-named states lie in the Far West. Any one who has seen the snow-clad peaks of Nevada can well appreciate the descriptive word, "Snowy."

While not explored or colonized by Spaniards, Montana bears a Spanish (some say Latin) name. This large state's giant ranges and cordilleras make its name, which means "mountainous," singularly appropriate.

Colorado was probably named from the river, although only its tributaries flow through the state. The word is Spanish for "red" in the sense of "ruddy," and may come from the color of the stream at some places.

Then, again, it is possible that the state was named from the red earth of some regions which were settled in the early days.

Capturing Elephants.—How are elephants captured for the circuses of the United States and other countries? An English traveler describes the method. First, the wild elephant herd must be sighted in the wilderness of India. Then a regiment of Indian soldiers surrounds the herd, keeping fires burning all around the big animals. A stockade is built of stout posts, and leading from the stockade is erected a narrow lane, which spreads out at the opening. The posts of this lane must be hidden with green foliage and vines. The herd is now driven toward the jaws of this lane by the soldiers, who yell and screech, and build fires directly behind the moving mass. The elephants, or some of them, enter the stockade, the rope that holds the gate is cut, and the animals are imprisoned. Riders on tame elephants then tie them with ropes.

Like Father, Like Son.—"Do look at the way baby is working his mouth," exclaimed young Mrs. Scraggington. "See! Now he proposes to put his foot in it."

"Mm," said her husband grumpily. "Heredit! That's what I did when I proposed." — Boston Evening Transcript.

Unnatural.—Dauber—What do you mean by saying my picture isn't true to life? Friend Wife—Why, you've got two women in brand new gowns going in opposite directions and they're not looking back at each other.—New York Sun.

And Ties For Fifth Place In

SECOND ANNUAL HILL CLIMB

Last year, it will be recalled, the Jewett won first; second and tied for third place in the Menands Hill Climb.

In competition, and in every day performance, there is no car in its class that will stand up with the Jewett.

Two of the cars in the contest had already been driven 15,000 and 18,000 miles, respectively.

Thousands of families have chosen the Jewett "Six"—because there is more car for the money. A "Six" at the price of a "Four."

You and your family also can go anywhere in your Jewett. Challenge any comer to pick his hill and stay with your Jewett. Let him match your acceleration—2 to 25 miles per hour in 7 seconds. Your 50 horsepower eats hills with power to spare.

PAIGE WINS!

In Fastest Time of The Contest

Competing against cars of all prices, in the free-for-all event, the Paige won Saturday in the fastest time of the day.

Paige already holds a national record for stock cars in speed—over 96 miles per hour.

On hills or on levels, the big Paige 70 horsepower motor waits only a light touch on accelerator to flash silently and smoothly ahead—from 2 to 70 miles an hour in high.

U. S. DEBT CUT IN LAST YEAR

Treasury Report Shows Reduction of $613,674,342.

SURPLUS OF 309 MILLIONS

Washington.—Complete figures covering the government's financial operations for the fiscal year show receipts for the twelve months of $4,007,125,460 and expenditures of $3,697,476,020, indicating a surplus of $309,649,440.

At the close of business June 30 the government owed $22,546,707,865 on outstanding securities. This total represents a reduction in the twelve months of $613,674,342, of which $402,850,491 was taken into account in compiling the "ordinary" or budget expenditures of the government. From the surplus on hand, the treasury applied a total of $210,828,851 to reducing its obligations.

Custom Receipts Set Record.

Part of the success in building up a surplus while at the same time the public debt was reduced was traced by the treasury to the administration's tariff policy, which, it was declared, resulted in the establishment of a record, receipts in customs duties totaling $561,928,866. This total is almost 60 per cent greater than for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, when duties of $356,448,387 were reported, marking a high point for customs revenue to that time.

Income and profits taxes paid into the treasury during the last twelve months, like the receipts from customs collections, also exceeded expectations, the total being $1,678,607,428, while the estimate given in the budget last December was $1,500,000,000. Other forms of internal revenue gave the treasury an additional $845,865,382. The government started the new fiscal year with $370,936,121.08 in the treasury's general fund. A year ago the general fund was $272,105,512.83.

"During the last twelve months," a formal statement, issued by the treasury, said, "about $4,500,000,000 of government debt matured and was either retired or refunded, thus completing the treasury's program for refunding the $7,500,000,000 in short-dated debt maturing within about two years which was outstanding at the beginning of the administration."

"In other words, since the refunding program was announced on April 30, 1921, about $4,070,000,000 of Victory notes have been retired, treasury certificates of indebtedness have been reduced from $2,820,000,000 to about $1,080,000,000, maturing on quarterly tax payment dates, and war savings securities have been reduced from $713,000,000 to about $80,000,000, while new treasury savings securities to the amount of about $245,000,000 and about $4,100,000,000 of treasury notes maturing on various quarterly tax payment dates during the years 1924 to 1927, have been issued and are now outstanding. During the same period the gross public debt has been reduced about $1,650,000,000.

$1,390,000,000 Debt to Mature.

In the fiscal year 1924, which began July 1, 1923, there will be public debt maturities of about $1,390,000,000, including about $1,080,000,000 of treasury certificates of indebtedness, about $310,000,000 of treasury notes maturing June 15, 1924, and about $50,000,000 of war savings certificates of the 1919 series, maturing January 1, 1924. In addition, there are still outstanding about $86,000,000 of 4 per cent Victory notes, which matured or were called for redemption during the fiscal year 1923, and about $30,000,000 of war savings certificates of the 1913 series, which matured on January 1, 1923. These are being presented for redemption from day to day, and the amounts still outstanding are being gradually reduced."

Wedding Rings for Men.

At one time most men wore rings to indicate the state of their affections. An Eighteenth century writer affirms: "If a gentleman wants a wife he wears a ring on the first finger of the left hand; if he is engaged, he wears it on the second finger; if married, on the third; and on the fourth if he never intends to be married."

ASHES OF ROSES

By KITTY PARSONS

ALL her life long Joy had never been so still before. She lay on her couch with closed eyes, trying to think. Joy was not used to reclining, but the doctor had insisted upon it—her ultimate recovery would be a question of long, tedious months of lying on her back.

There was a knock at the door and Malcolm came in. Joy had been waiting for him all day, literally counting the minutes till he came.

"I've just heard of your accident, Joy. It's a crime. Will you be here long?"

"For months, the doctor says."

"How dreadful! What shall I do without you after all these weeks of playing around together? No more dancing or dining or walking with you this spring—it makes me sick!"

Joy thought of the last three wonderful months and a chill struck her heart. How happy they had been, dancing, laughing, joking! They had always been merry and gay—never serious for a moment. Malcolm hated to be serious when he could be amused. Life had been one glad song to them both.

"But it isn't over," she almost pleaded. "You'll come to see me and talk to me often, won't you?"

"Of course," he assured her. "But it won't be the same." Joy thought he looked ill at ease in a sick-room, not at all like himself. Somehow Malcolm seemed to belong to life and health and happiness; trouble and suffering had little place in his life. But of course he was a genius.

"Do you remember, a week ago to-night, how we rode down town on top of the bus, with the snow falling all over us? And how we explored the queer little streets and alleys? What fun we had!"

"And the hot dogs?"

"Oh, yes, the hot dogs! And the coffee!"

"And the dance hall—don't forget that. How they almost put us out because I held you too close."

"Yes, yes, I remember." Joy caught her breath sharply. She knew nothing could make her forget that night—or any other night when she had been with him. She longed to tell him so but she couldn't.

A few minutes later Malcolm pleaded a business engagement and hurried away. That was Wednesday. He promised to return on Friday. After he had gone Joy thought of all the things he had not said.

Thursday about the same time there was another knock on the door and Joy was thrilled with expectancy. He could not wait! But it was David and not Malcolm who opened the door.

David dropped on his knees beside her couch and took her hand in his.

"Poor little Joy," his voice caressed her. "How hard it must be for you to lie here so quietly day after day, when you are always so full of life and gladness. I can't bear to think of it."

David's only thought was for her, but Joy hardly heard him. She was longing for Friday to come. David hurried on:

"Marry me now and I'll take care of you always. I'll cancel my passage Saturday for China and get work here if you want me to do it—it's not too late if you need me."

Joy wanted the comfort of his protecting arms, but she knew she could not rest there. The laughing face of Malcolm stood between them. So she sent David away.

Friday her heart sang with happiness as she waited for Malcolm. She arranged her hair in a most becoming fashion and wore her most bewitching negligee. And she burned incense in the tall vase on the mantel. Her illness and enforced idleness no longer mattered—nothing in the world mattered except that it was spring and Malcolm would soon be there! Over and over her heart sang the same joyous song.

At 5 the maid brought her a large box of roses, with a line scribbled on the card: "So sorry—unexpectedly delayed. Will phone, M. S." Outside the window a robin sang and sang and sang, and Joy wondered how anyone could be so cheerful. She had quite forgotten that it was spring.

Saturday she thrilled anew at the thought of his coming. David's tenderness was long since forgotten—David wasn't a poet, so, of course, he was different. All day long she waited, her ear attuned, sensitive to every ring of the bell. Once a delivery boy came and again the letter carrier, but there was no word from Malcolm.

When Joy had almost given up hope, the maid brought her his telegram. For some moments she held it in her hand, fear clutching at her heart. He must be ill, perhaps dying. Certainly something terrible had happened to him. At last she gathered strength to tear it open. There were only a few words, starting sharply at her in the cold, clear type of the telegraph company: "Leaving today for three years' travel in China. Sorry not to see you before sailing. Best wishes for your speedy recovery. Will write from other side.—Malcolm."

For a long time Joy lay perfectly still, staring at the roses beside her couch. And she noticed that one of the loveliest of them all had already begun to droop.

Taming of Guineas Must Be Started Right Away

Guineas can be tamed if their training begins immediately after hatching. If you want them tame it is best to hatch them under common hens and keep them confined while small, teaching them to roost in the hen-houses. In this way they will be quite tame, though they will probably never care to be handled. Some like to have them wild. In that case they may be hatched by the guinea hens, though on a farm, if there are enemies about and they are allowed to roam, they may be killed.

Guineas are noisy, but they have a place on the farm. Demand for them is growing in Eastern markets. They are most excellent eating, some finding them similar to prairie chickens. They are fair layers. The eggs are richer than hens' eggs and are said to keep longer.

High Value of Feeding Eggs to Little Chicks

Poultrymen occasionally doubt the value of feeding eggs to baby chicks. Experiments conducted at the University of Wisconsin show that the addition of a small amount of eggs to the ration for baby chicks will give surprisingly good results.

NY Traffic Policeman

To prevent automobile drivers hitting traffic policemen on darkened corners, these white leather patches, treated with luminous paint, are being attached to the uniforms of New York traffic cops. They can be seen a long distance on dark and stormy nights.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATERS

Every New York paper was enthusiastic in its praise of "The Girl of the Golden West" when it was shown on the screen in that city. The film will be shown at Keene's tonight and Saturday. It was a fine stage play. As a grand opera it was successful and it is said it has lost none of its effectiveness in filming. Romance and thrills are interwoven in a setting of the California mountains and there is a happy ending.

Coming to the Auditorium Theatre today, is a new Fox picture starring Charles Jones. It is called "West of Chicago." Supporting Jones are the vivacious, winsome Renee Adoree, whose acting in Fox productions of late has been the subject of a great deal of very complimentary comment.

PLUTARCH.

On hearing a disturbance in the chicken house last Tuesday morning about three o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Henry McCormick went out to see what the trouble was. They found a big skunk. Mr. McCormick got the gun and while Mrs. McCormick held the light, he soon made a finish of Mr. Skunk, who had already killed 37 nice big chickens. He was some chimer as he had to climb a four foot fence to get by the chickens.

Senator Hiram Johnson

Many who heard United States Senator Hiram Johnson's speech at the welcoming banquet given him in New York upon his return from his European tour, assert his words definitely have put him in the race for the Republican nomination for the Presidency against President Harding next year. Senator Johnson's attack on the Harding policies, especially the World Court idea, indicated a clear cut break between the Californian and Mr. Harding.

SPANISH CHURCH
ERECTED IN 661

Building Stands Practically Same as When Finished.

IS WORTHY EXAMPLE OF ART

The old temples, basilicas and baptisries built in Spain at the dawn of Christianity have all disappeared, and one can but construct mind pictures of them from reading the carefully written literary records. A fairly accurate idea of early Christian architecture is gained from these descriptions, but to the ordinary reader they do not carry the same lasting impression that is to be obtained from seeing a thing for one's self and perhaps taking a snapshot of it.

There are still standing in Spain today ruins or reconstructions of temples built there during the Seventh century. The ruins of Segobriga and the chapel of Elieche, Santa Comba de Bande and San Miguel de Terras, the latter simply a baptistry, are examples of this early architecture, but in each case there is either a question as to the exact date of erection or in its present remodeled state little is left of the early style and atmosphere.

Rare Specimens of Art.

Francisco Mendirabal, in an article in "A B C" says that the oldest church of which the date of building is certain is the Basilica of San Juan Bautista de Banos de Cerrato, built in 661 by Reccesvinto, an early king of the Visigoths. The peculiar thing about this church which sets it apart from others built a few years earlier, perhaps, and still standing, is the fact that with slight changes it kept through the ages very nearly the same form in which it came from the hands of the ancient Visigoth workmen. It is said of this church:

"It is the oldest of the Christian temples of Spain, and without a doubt the most important one which has been preserved with regard to architectural worth, structure and integrity. It is not a ruin, a fragment. It is a complete specimen, unequaled in Spain."

This old basilica, situated not far from Palencia, in northern Spain, was dedicated to St. John by the king who had it built. Reccesvinto, during his reign, undertook to crush a rebellion among the Basques, who had revolted against him. Having accomplished this, he returned to old Castile victorious, but exhausted and ill, and sought rest and solace in the quiet fields along the Pisuerga river.

Story of Cure of King.

One day, the story goes, he was walking beside the banks of a clear stream and, coming to a crystal spring, he leaned down to drink. Almost as soon as the water touched his lips he felt that he was being relieved of the disease that he had contracted. He continued to drink, and as he did so he was miraculously cured. He attributed the miracle to St. John, to whose protection he had long ago committed himself, and as an act of gratitude had the temple built not far from the healing spring and dedicated it to St. John.

It is a quaint building, this Basilica de San Juan Bautista, with its columns of colored jasper and Corinthian capitals. The wall of the nave, above the horseshoe arches, is cut by a row of small windows of the same horseshoe shape, and within the church one may see above the central arch the old decorative inscription written so many centuries ago.

DANISH RULER IS A GIANT

King Christian Six Feet Six Inches Tall; One Was Eight Feet.

King Christian, who celebrated his silver wedding recently, is 6 feet 6 inches in height, the tallest of the world's rulers. He comes of a family noted for height. In the cathedral of Roskilde, where Denmark's kings lie buried, the only monument to Christian I is a line scratched eight feet above the pavement on a pillar, which shows his stature when alive. Many famous men have measured themselves against this record of the giant king, but the only one to surpass it was Pat Murphy, the Irish wonder, who towered 8 feet 6 inches.

Coincidence rather than heredity enables the present Danish king to uphold the tradition, for the royal family of Denmark is not Danish in blood or descent so much as German.

TO STOP HOPI SNAKE DANCE

Indians in Arizona Requested to Discontinue Famous Tribal Dance.

Charles H. Burke, United States commissioner of Indian affairs, has requested Indian tribes of Arizona to discontinue their tribal dances, especially the famous Hopi snake dance held each August, and has made known that the request will be followed by an executive order if necessary.

The belief that the handling of poisonous reptiles is injurious to the Indians is said to have led to the request.

Indians in northern Arizona have expressed dissatisfaction with the request on the ground that it constitutes interference with tribal religious ceremonies. The Hopi snake dance is known as one of the world's most famous Indian ceremonies, and has been witnessed by thousands of visitors in past years.

E.V. Browning and adopted children

Edward W. Browning, multi-millionaire New York real estate operator, son of the founder of Browning, King & Co., an immense New York clothing house, has filed suit for divorce against his wife, Mrs. Nellie Browning, alleging she has fled to Paris with Dr. Charles Wilson, an obscure French (New York) dentist, who is said to have quite a way with the fair sex. Mr. Browning, who is 44 years older than his beautiful wife, had recently made over a trust fund of $100,000 for her. They had no children, but had adopted two, one of whom, Margery, is missing. The Browning's New York home, atop an office building, with artificial lakes and gardens, was one of the most beautiful in the metropolis.

SHAKESPEARE GETS A 1923 TOUCH

A Revised Version of "The Seven Ages of Man" Presented at Sahler's By Local Talent.

Three centuries ago this year Shakespeare produced "The Seven Ages of Man" and Wednesday evening, under the title of "The Pageant of Life," it was reproduced at the Dr. C. O. Sahler Sanatorium.

Of course, ways and things and people and plays change with passing centuries, and so has this philosophical bit of "As You Like It," under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Wait. It is quite possible that a William Winter or a Delacoe might not be in full accord with the present version, but what about it? The audience highly enjoyed the play, and as "the play's the thing," why say more? Broadly speaking, the theme of "The Pageant of Life" closely follows the "Seven Ages of Man." For instance, there is infancy instead of the infant, childhood replaces the whining school boy, and so on to the peak and down the shady side of life.

But to begin at the beginning. At eight o'clock when the audience was still, and it was black, back stage, there came from the darkening west the unexpected clear notes of a bugle and out of misty nothingness there gradually took form a ghost-like white horse, aged beyond years, drawing a dilapidated carriage that had seen its heyday during the fifties of the last century. Slowly the equipage reached the pavilion, stopped, and out stepped four Continentals in the dress of their time. It was puzzling at first. Here were men of 1776 riding in a rig of 1850 and driving to see a 1923 play. And then the audience grasped the point that a prelude, so to speak, had been enacted making clear that novelty would act as the real stage director in this modern reproduction of Shakespeare's play.

The Play.

Reading of "The Seven Ages of Man" by R. H. Bitzer. First stage—Infancy. Arranged and played in an atmosphere of Old Kentucky, with lullaby accompaniment. Characters, an old southern mammy and a tiny tot being crowned to sleep. Acted by Mrs. Josephine O. Martin and a lovely doll.

Second stage—Childhood. Cast Three John Drews, two Ethel Barrymores, and one Nora Bayes. A sort of love, fall out and make up again affair. "Childhood" were these. One of the John Drews found that the fruit he was to present to his lady love had perished so he extracted it from his pocket, considerably like a one man fight. However, John won, and has his property fruit scornfully refused, which was in accord with the lines, and not because he made a late delivery as some people seemed to think.

At another spot in the scene, the three beautiful ladies, on bended knees, and with piteous supplications offered their lovely dolls to the three brutal men. There was quite a bit of tender sentiment here, and the two Ethel Barrymores with their partners did exceedingly well. Nora Bayes, as per usual, however, nearly upset the scenery. Almee, or Nora, rather enjoys happiness better than bitter tears, so when she offered her dearly beloved doll to the back of one of the obstinate John, she turned to the audience smiling cheerfully, and did about everything except actually inviting all hands to come up on the stage and help her enjoy a few heart rending moments. The Drews and Barrymores were first class. Nora was a hit. Nora Bayes; Almee Almfelt. The Barrymores, Kathryn Stock and Phyllis Dordman. The Drews: Leonard O'Hara, Edward O'Hara, and Paul Stock.

3rd Stage—The Lovers.

The action placed in Revolutionary days, with the addition of a stately minuet, gracefully measured and altogether pleasing to see. Presented as a pantomime. Acted by Miss Elizabeth Wait, Miss Ruby Almfelt, and M. Koropoff.

4th Stage—The Soldier.

Far different was Shakespeare's pictured soldier. "Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard, jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel, seeking the bubble reputation."

The version presented was modern, something all could understand with the memory of the world war fresh in mind. Here stood a soldier of the clear cut, efficient fighting man of today. Likewise a Red Cross nurse of humanity, and over both the Angel of Peace. Artistically arranged and well presented. Soldier, Dr. G. A. Almfelt. Nurse, Miss H. Collins. Angel, Miss Florence Nicholson.

5th Stage—The Judge.

A tableau of Solomon's judgment between the mothers. An effective and dramatic reproduction of this well known biblical picture.

6th Stage—Old Age.

Tableau, accompanied by a sympathetic reading of Oliver Wendell Holmes's famous poem, "The Last Leaf." Old Age, posed by Mr. Koropoff. Reading, Mr. Bitzer.

7th Stage—The Three Fates.

Tableau, "Sans Eyes, Sans Teeth, Sans Taste." Rich in dramatic theme and intelligently interpreted. Posed by Miss C. A. Gottschalk. Miss H. Collins, and Mrs. M. Crocker.

Negro Impersonations.

A series of true to nature interpretations, by a southerner, who knows her south and its colored children, and has the rare ability to portray without burlesque. Presented by Mrs. Josephine O. Martin.

The talent throughout was local, the program as a whole was really enjoyable, and in the audience which overflowed the pavilion proper, were many of Kingston's well known families.

Thought for the Day.

The man who can't do a good turn without intending to make it pay is as contemptible as the man who can't receive a favor without suspecting a wrong motive.

PESKY BED BUGS

Bedbugs lay an average of seven eggs per day. Under favorable conditions they hatch in five days of which two-thirds are females. They mature to adult size and are capable of laying in four weeks. How many bedbugs would you have in a year if you left one female or egg unmolested for one year?

To get the pesky bedbug, you really can't see it. It is a parasite that will kill you as well as the live one. It is a pest that is not only a nuisance but a danger to your health. It is a pest that is not only a nuisance but a danger to your health. It is a pest that is not only a nuisance but a danger to your health.

MAN THE WEAKER?

Woman Calls Him "Bedraggled Scarecrow in Trousers."

Female of the Species a "Stalking Tigeress," Made Up to Look Lively, Frail, and Helpless.

"There never was a woman born who was satisfied with the man she married. She always makes him over, or, rather, she mistakes his gradual disintegration for something constructive in her own handiwork."

"The universal husband! Pathetic, bedraggled scarecrow in trousers. No wonder men always answer their country's call to arms. It is far easier to face quick death on the battlefield than slow death in the domestic hearth."

"At home they are helpless, numb. Things overtake them, fasten on them while they are asleep. Whoever way they go, it is not the way of their choice. They are pushed along from behind, never doing any of the things they desire, never wanting any of the things they get."

"Four universal husband!"

So Jane Burr writes, with scorching pen. She begins:

"As the blast of trumpets and the swirl of smoke gradually die down on the feminist battle front, an unbiased eye sees, still breathing but spiritually dead, a pathetic, bedraggled sort of scarecrow in trousers—the universal husband! The universal husband, made out of all the promising little boys in the world, is warped and cheated by women from the moment he expands his lungs at birth until he contracts them (often willfully) at the moment of death."

"During infancy his mother eats him alive, smothering him with emotion in order to get a personal outlet, makes of him, if she can, her bowing, scraping courtier, ties him to her by a thousand invisible but unbreakable threads. He tries to escape her in boyhood, but in the reflex caused by an insult from some pink sunbonnet and pinafore he rushes back to mother for consolation. Mother consoles and gloats. She has him back. All her life she watches like a bird of prey for a recurrence of this chance to console and to gloat."

"Later on, in his effort to escape mother, he falls in love—which means, in most cases, exchanging a cruel power for a crueler one."

"He sees a frail, lovely, helpless girl, and his heart goes out to her; he wants to build his nest with her, for her; he longs to buy her trinkets, to guard and protect her from the vicious outside world."

"As a matter of honest fact, he does not want to do any of these things. He only thinks he wants to do them. Old primitive nature is undermining his reason; old primitive nature has got to get her rough work done."

"After marriage the promising youth with his fantastic ideas becomes a universal husband. The frail, lovely, helpless girl proves to be neither frail nor helpless. She was made up to look frail, lovely and helpless in order to sell his manly qualities. With the noose secure about his neck, he sees her remove her paint, her eyelash black, her face powder, her false tresses. He suffers as he watches the exposure of her outward dishonesty."

"Physically, at least, a woman gets what she marries, but men never know until the artificialities are removed."

"As men are little boys, they might even forget the exposure of their wives' physical disabilities if it were not for the things they later discover in women's souls."

"Women have very little honesty, no modesty and no sense of shame. They cannot afford such fairy-book luxuries. Real honesty, modesty and a sense of shame are not things with which to catch a husband. Maiden women invariably possess some of these abnormal qualities. That is why they remain maiden women."

"A woman cannot be frail. She is not frail. She is a tigress. She is not helpless. She can move mountains, and does if she is not always given her own way. If she were helpless the universal husband would know how to provide for her, how to place her in his relation to a struggle for existence. But he does not know where to place her. She turns up at unexpected moments, in unexpected places, and acts as a positive menace to his psychology and to his business career."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Raising Queen Bees for Profit.
Raising queen bees brings a Calallen (Tex.) man an annual revenue of more than $50,000, most of which is clear profit. Breeding queen bees is done partly by artificial means. He figures on obtaining about 100 queens from every hive of 2,000 to 3,000 working bees. Instead of only one queen. Queen bees bring from $1 to $2.75 each.

JUDGE UPHOLDS PROPERTY RIGHTS OF DOG IN BONE

San Francisco Court Hands Down Ruling That Is Epochal in Annals of Dogdom.

A new right has been won for America's dogdom. Recent decisions in various courts have recognized a dog's right as a contestant in legal actions, but now, for the first time, it has been solemnly decreed that a dog is full legal owner of a bone, once he has it in his possession.

And dogs throughout the country can thank Teddy, local canine resident, Alexander Moslin, his attorney, and Police Judge Sylvain J. Lazarus as they gnaw their soup-bones in peace.

Teddy was brought into Judge Lazarus' court recently to answer the most serious charge a dog can face. He had attacked a member of the superior race called Man. The victim in this case was the five-year-old child of a neighbor.

The death penalty was demanded. There was no disputed evidence. Teddy was guilty. A red row of teeth marks on the infant's arm constituted the telltale corpus delicti.

Despite his eight years of unimpeachable conduct, things looked black for Teddy.

Of course, the dog's lawyer brought out the fact that the child had tried to rob him of his bone, but what would that avail in a court where all the laws were made for men and none were made for dogs?

Then Judge Lazarus rendered his decision, epochal in the annals of dogdom. It was a rift in the lure so far as expectations were concerned.

An amazed audience heard him say: "This dog has done nothing to deserve death."

"The evidence has shown that this dog was gnawing on a bone. That bone was his own property—and what more valuable property could a dog have than a large, juicy bone?"

"Anyone trying to deprive a dog of such property has violated the latter's most sacred property rights, and it is an invasion which the dog has a right to prevent with force."

"No one would condemn the man who shot a burglar. Yet, if we can get the viewpoint of the dog, his provocation was as great as would be the man's."

"Judges should always try to comprehend the emotions which actuated the animal on trial."

"Though their actions may sometimes appear incomprehensible, perhaps some superior being looking down on us may find our so-called ethical actions just as puzzling."

DOE SUMMONS A RESCUER

Leads Fisherman to Marshes Where Fawn Is Mired.

Reuben Johnston of Caldwell, N. J., was summoned by a wild doe to rescue her fawn, which had been mired in the marshes two miles south of Pine Brook.

Johnston was in a rowboat on the Passaic river, fishing, when he noticed the doe, apparently in distress, pacing the bank. When Johnston rowed close to shore the doe seemed to beseech him to follow her. Johnston, in his boat, followed the doe as she trotted along the bank until he came in sight of a clump of sweet flags. There a fawn had sunk in the mud until all but its head was covered.

Johnston extricated the fawn. The doe, her eyes glistening, standing by. Then the two animals trotted away.

Dr. Helen B. Allen and her daughter, Miss Myrtle Allen.

A sensation has been caused by the arrest in Los Angeles, Cal., of Dr. Helen B. Allen, who posed as the philanthropic manager of schools for mountain children in Virginia and North Carolina. It is ascertained that Dr. Allen, who has adapted 57 boys and girls—most girls—between 13 and 17, secured more than $200,000 from charitably inclined persons in Pittsburgh and in Ohio for his schools. It is charged he took Mrs. Helen Allen, a young divorcee, Myrtle Allen, 17, and Myrtle Allen, 18, to California, in violation of the Mann White Slave laws. California dispatches indicate that revelations that will surpass those of the "House of David" may be expected.

VON BERG MAKES BIG ADDITION

Wall Street Restaurant Will Now Have Seating Capacity For More Than 200—Addition to Restaurant Opens Saturday.

The opening of the large new addition to William von Berg's restaurant opposite the court house on Wall street will take place Saturday and will furnish additional accommodation which increasing business has made necessary for some time.

The new addition to the restaurant formerly was occupied by the ladies' furnishing store of Ralph D. Clearwater, who removed to No. 303 Wall street. Mr. von Berg connected the new addition with his present restaurant and has seating capacity for more than two hundred diners.

Tables and the lunch counter in the older part of the restaurant will remain as before and the addition will provide space for additional tables for special dinner parties, banquets, etc.

Since coming to Kingston less than three years ago, Mr. von Berg has proved himself a thorough going restaurant man and the business has far outgrown the original quarters.

The high standard of meals and service has been steadily maintained and von Berg's Restaurant has become one of the best known eating places along the Hudson river.

Continued maintenance of meals and service and the increased seating capacity will still further increase its prestige locally and among tourists.

The additional space has been painted and decorated to conform to the original restaurant and many improvements have been made, including the construction of a ladies' retiring room.

The opening of von Berg's addition comes at a most opportune time when tourist travel is becoming heavier than at any other time this year.

MAN WHO WOULD'NT DIE IS ELECTROCUTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Little Rock, Ark., July 27.—As first beams of light shot over the hills of Arkansas today, the soul of Herbert Sease, "the man who would not die," passed from his body in the death room of the state penitentiary here as two gray Salvation Army leaders chanted a death dirge outside his cell "My Soul's Going to Rise Again, My Soul's Going to Rise Again."

Sease, electrocuted for one of the most brutal murders in the annals of Arkansas criminal history, twice lived through the date set for his death and contended until the last minute that the high voltage of an electric chair would not hurt him, because he declared "the Lord has promised that I shall not die."

BALDWIN FEELS HIS HEAVY LOAD

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Edinburgh, Scotland, July 27.—Premier Stanley Baldwin, in a speech before the Conservative Club here today said he realized the extent of the heavy burden on his shoulders, but "will do his best to pursue a straight and honest course."

He devoted much of his talk to socialism, advocating the belief that the development of the individual is the best assurance of national progress.

Premier Baldwin said he believed the chief reason for the present interest in socialism, Government control during the war, helped popularize the socialistic number he added.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New York, July 27.—The stock market opened irregular today. Fractional declines and advances were about evenly divided.

Weakness in the shares of northwestern railroads and of oil featured the forenoon trading on the stock exchange today. Northwest Pacific and Great Northern Preferred were down 2 points to below 59 and 57 respectively. The rest of the railroad shares held steady.

The unsettledness in the oil group, comprising practically all dividend paying issues, was based on the belief that many companies, facing the necessity of carrying large inventories, will be forced to now financing or cut their dividends, or both. The market continued heavy all through the afternoon, and prices were down from a fraction to over 2 points.

SCOTTS SCOUR WEST FOR A BOOTLEGGER.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Washington, July 27.—Seven canny Scotchmen, investigating prohibition in the United States, left Washington for Chicago, St. Louis and points west in search of a bootlegger.

They came here after interviewing dry leaders in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore and found out as much as they could about prohibition in the national capital in conversations with officials of the Anti-Saloon League. But in all their American travels they have been unable to get the point of view of an actual dealer in rum.

The information that they gather will be used in connection with the local option election in Scotland this fall.

NAVY ESSENTIAL, SAYS PRESIDENT

Should be Kept at High Efficiency Within Treaty Limits—Reviews Pacific Fleet and Hoboken With Newspaper Men.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Seattle, Wash., July 27.—Until the day comes when the nations of the world will agree not to employ armed forces the United States must place its chief reliance in a first rank navy, President Harding told the Seattle Press Club here today in his first address after returning from Alaska.

The president made his speech after a morning spent in reviewing the splendid Pacific fleet drawn up in battle array for the presidential home coming. Fresh from the fleet review, came the newspaper men of the northwest and to them he uttered the hope that congress will ever see the necessity of keeping the American navy up to the treaty strength which he reminded his hearers was that of a first rate naval power.

"Let us hope our congress with the cordial sanction of the American people will continue that first rank," the president said. "I believe our obligation to the world means the most exacting restriction of our maintenance within the maximum limitation fixed by the arms conference and I believe our clear duty to ourselves is to maintain the equality provided in that international conference."

Any failure to keep the United States navy in the first rank cannot be charged to foreign influence, the president said, but is directly chargeable against us.

The president's address to the press club was brief and devoted mostly to his declarations on the naval review, but he also talked "shop" a bit. The complete text follows:

"When our transport brought us to your great harbor this morning, we passed the Pacific fleet to give review. Ours was an impressive view and a very reassuring one. Within the memory of men who are still in active service our navy, once deficient of any power on the sea, had become so inconspicuous that there was none to do it homage. We were as humble with our armed forces on the sea as we were pitiable with our merchant marine. Today we saw the Pacific fleet, indicating a first rank navy, not second or third or eighth or tenth, but equal to the first rank."

"I believe it is covenanted in our national honor that our navy shall retain that first rank and any failure at retention must be charged to ourselves because the world has deliberately acknowledged the righteousness of our first rank position."

"Perhaps the day may come—I would speed it all I could—when nations will employ no armed forces. Until such a day comes, we shall find assurance in a navy of the first rank. We were building two years ago at a rate that would have placed our armed sea power in excess of any other power but in conviction that disarmament cost and competition was leading to menacing national burdens, we instituted an international conference to fix limitations."

"We owe it to ourselves to understand that the navy is rather more than a mere instrumentality of warfare. It is the right arm to the department of state, seeing to the enforcement of its rigorous protection of our possessions wherever they are. It guards the security of our world over. One could not feel that its unfolding means security for Americans wherever they seek its proper protection."

"It has our colors aloft today almost everywhere on the seven seas, at Smyrna to offer proper restraint and relief; in Chinese waters to make for security; in all waters to urge tranquility and maintain righteousness and with it all to emphasize our confidence in ourselves and our sense of obligation at home."

"You will have observed that I have assigned myself to report on the naval review rather than talk shop on this happy occasion. Assuming that one most readily talks upon the subject which he most loves, I should have ventured some observations on the fourth estate. Ignoring the little distinction which attended I find a pride in nearly forty years of newspaper making and a reflective survey, persuade me that the great satisfaction has come of a policy designed always to boost and rarely to knock. Those of us who think we know a great lot about newspaper making may learn some very simple fundamentals by going to Alaska. I found myself voluntarily taking the hat to the editor and doffing my hat to the publisher."

"I have been in a town of eight to twelve hundred people where the circulation maximum cannot exceed two or three hundred copies. I refrain from an attempted analysis of the relation of the value of advertising to its cost, but the community value of the publication will remain unchallenged."

The big asset in the successful Alaskan sheet is the home news and when the final analysis of the making of a newspaper is written here is the secret of most newspaper success.

"Give me a newspaper which is a true reflex of the community it serves and I know I am reading an index to dependable public opinion as well as potent agent in moulding that opinion."

"An honest and an intelligent press which accretes a highly respected press affords a limitless opportunity for community service and the loftiest employment in life. It may preach to the larger congregation to commend and defend the law. It is the effective mouthpiece of our politics. It is the teacher which knows no vacation. It is the recording agent of human accomplishment whose simple story is the ever continuing inspiration to loftier achievement. Let those of us who find pride in association with the making of the American press the best press in the world, resolve upon a full appraisal of our responsibilities and see that conscience is maintained."

COMPLICATED BUS
PERMIT HEARING

Schoonmaker had gone in the morning and the schedule had been advertised in the time table and the amount of fare is also stated. Time was placed in evidence. Mr. Merritt asked if he did not now charge 10 cents from Woodstock to Kingston and 50 cents from Woodstock to West Hurley. Mr. Longyear said he had not done it on regular line, but on his omnibus line the charge was higher.

Mr. Eckert, for the Pine Hill Bus Line, asked the commission to announce that the public service commission cannot grant a certificate of public convenience and necessity unless the law has been complied with.

The hearing was then adjourned until the next day at 10 a. m. The public service commission cannot grant a certificate of public convenience and necessity unless the law has been complied with.

DOGS HAVE BEAUTY PARLOR

Muzzles, Tails and Ears Are Altered, Hairs Plucked.

The French have now established an "Institute of Beauty for Dogs." It seems that to change the form of a dog's muzzle costs $20, to alter the dimensions of his tail $4, to convert a drooping ear to one close set to the head $8. Smaller operations, such as the removal of superfluous hairs, are performed at charges proportionately lower.

The grave Journal des Debats, devoting a leader to the "Institute of Beauty for Dogs," remarks that humans accept with philosophy the principle, "Il faut souffrir pour être belle," but it is hard to discover what esthetic pleasure can be given to a dog by submitting itself to the operations of the beauty doctor.

TURTLE'S BITE WRECKS AUTO

Sinks Back Into Driver's Ankle and Hangs On.

When George Ardler, motortruck driver for a Pittsburgh concern, passed through Butler county, Pennsylvania, he had never met up with the old-fashioned land turtle known as a snapper. He saw one of the queer creatures at the side of the road and stopped and took it into the cab of his truck.

The snapper enjoyed the ride for a while, and then started to explore the floor of the cab. Taking a notion for fresh meat he fastened his beak in Ardler's ankle and held on. Ardler used some hot language and in his efforts to kick the snapper loose lost control of his truck, which was wrecked against the guard rail of a bridge and almost fell into a creek.

When the turtle was pried loose from Ardler's leg he ambled off as though nothing had happened.

FISH PUT UP GOOD "SCRAP"

"Pla-Kat" of Siam Furnishes Form of Sport for the People of That Country.

In Siam the "Pla-kat," or fighting fish, is widely noted. Cantor says if one sees its own image in a looking glass, the little creature becomes suddenly excited, the raised fins and the whole body shine with metallic colors of dazzling beauty, while the projected gill membrane, waving like a black veil round the throat, adds something of grotesqueness to the general appearance. In this state it makes repeated darts at its real or reflected antagonist.

The Siamese are as infatuated with the combats of these fish as the Malays are with their cock-fights, and stake on the issue considerable sums, and sometimes their own persons and families. The license to exhibit fish-fights is farmed, and brings a considerable annual revenue to the king of Siam. This fighting species of fish abounds in the rivulets at the foot of the hills of Penang, but the kind kept especially for fighting is an artificial variety, cultivated for the purpose.

APPEALED TO MAN'S VANITY

Brightly Colored Beads, in Some Shape, Have Been Popular in All Ages and Countries.

Beads are one of the oldest witnesses to the vanity of mankind. The oldest beads were simply stones with holes through them, which, owing to their bright color or peculiar shape, took the fancy of the finder, who threaded them on a strip of hide or fiber. Later, when we became more civilized, beads made of wood carved into fantastic shapes were in favor. Some beautiful examples of both kinds can be seen in the British museum. Uncivilized races have a passion for stringing together various objects as beads. Human teeth, brightly colored insects, seeds, and even whales' teeth, are worn in this way.

The word bead comes from "bede," the old English word for prayer. It has an interesting origin. In olden times, as a person repeated his prayers they were counted by ticking off one by one a string of small pierced balls which were threaded together, and in time these balls came to be called beads.

HAVE FAITH IN SAINT VITUS

Victims of Dancing Disease Credit Relics of Martyr With Miraculous Powers.

Relics of St. Vitus, reputed to have miraculous powers, were deposited in the Abbey of Corvey in Saxony. The monks of Corvey became stout missionaries for the cult of St. Vitus and carried it to the island of Rugen, in the Baltic, inhabited by fierce worshippers of Thor and Odin. Under ministrations of those devout monks the Rugenians took quite kindly to Christianity, and especially to St. Vitus. But after a while a very singular thing happened. The islanders backslid from Christianity to heathenism, but took the dancing cult of St. Vitus with them, and for three centuries worshiped the gentle Christian martyr of Sicily as a terpsichorean Norse god. It was passed around by the ecclesi-

YANKEES SIGN ANOTHER SLUGGER

Leo Gehrig, star of the Columbia University baseball nine and reputed to be one of the heaviest hitters in college circles in many years, has been signed by the American league champion Yankees and will be given a thorough trial by Boss Huggins. Gehrig is shown taking a lesson from Babe Ruth on how to stand properly at the plate.

Diamond Squibs

The praises of Maurice Archdeacon are again being sung in Rochester.

Babe Adams is being bothered with a weak salary wing. It may force his retirement from baseball.

The Shreveport club has transferred Pitcher Glenn Harle to the Decatur club of the Three-I league.

Jacques Fournier, the former Cardinal first baseman, is hitting the ball hard and timely for Brooklyn.

Ken Williams of St. Louis is creeping up on Babe Ruth for home-run honors in the American league.

A. B. Hermann, third baseman on the Colgate nine, has signed up with the Boston National league club.

'Great men closely resemble common ones, and a home run is just a pop fly with a little more punch behind it.

The Bridgeport club obtained from the Cincinnati Nationals George Abrams, a young right-handed pitcher.

Moon Ducote, who has come back into baseball as an outfielder with the Portsmouth team of the Virginia league, is hitting the ball hard.

A tribute to "Wild Bill" Donovan's managerial genius is this year's New Haven aggregation, even more so than the pennant-winning club of 1922.

No sooner had Jimmy Viox recovered sufficiently to get in the lineup for the Louisville Colonels than Outfielder Merito Acosta broke a leg.

The Nashville club has turned Pitcher Lew Kraft back to the St. Louis Browns. He could not get the ball over the plate for the Volunteers.

Byron Speece, the sandlot and semi-pro twirler, whom Barney Burch of Omaha picked up during the winter, is continuing his sensational pitching.

Frank Calloway, rated as a coming star with the Philadelphia Athletics two years ago, is back in the Class D Appalachian league with Knoxville.

With Glenn Killinger hurt, the Atlanta infield was shifted around a bit. Turner Barber was put on first base and Floyd Herman sent to the outfield.

Catcher Luke Urban of the Buffalo team, who was put in a hospital when hit on the head by a ball pitched by Harry Frank of Baltimore, was not as seriously hurt as feared.

According to reports afloat in the International league, Clark Griffith of the Washington Americans has made an offer of $20,000 to the Toronto club for Outfielder Al Wingo.

The Galveston club has disposed of J. Don Brown to the Augusta club of the Sally league. This is the Don who was loaned to Houston early in the season and then recalled.

Zeke Lowman, veteran pitcher of minor leagues in the South, has a son who aspires to follow in his father's footsteps. Zeke Junior is getting a trial with the Texas association.

The Chicago Nationals have shipped Wichita Falls another pitcher in George Stueland, a right-hander, who tried Manager Bill Killefer's lack of patience with his lack of control.

Proof, according to this rabid baseball fan, that John McGraw is no diamond Solomon, is that he let Sverengro and Walberg get away by the waiver route to the Sox and the Athletics.

The Reading club has signed a young giant named Howard Kay from the independent ranks of Philadelphia. He stands six feet and three inches and is a right-handed pitcher and first baseman.

The Origin of Boggy.
The name boggy, applied to a small vehicle without a top, drawn by one horse, is of Hindi origin. The Hindi name is "baghi." After British occupation the officers altered the pronunciation to "boggy" for light traps.

A wave of Communism is sweeping Germany, increasing with each widespread depreciation of the value of the mark. Long Distance Driving Gives Golfer Advantage

Long driving is spectacular in golf. There is a wise guess that the long drive counts for little. Not for everything, of course, but the long drive gives a big advantage, anyway.

The distances that the good golfers get is interesting. At Troon, competitors in the British open held a driving contest and it was won by an eighteen-year-old boy, hitherto unheard of in golf. His lowest wallop was 273 yards and 2 feet.

Baseball Is Best Place for Men of Many Creeds

"Every now and then," says Manager Moran of the Cincinnati Nationals, "you'll hear some one prattling about religious differences among ball players. Religious factions on this, that or the other club."

"That's the worst nonsense in the world. In my opinion, baseball is the one best place for men of different creeds to learn respect for each other's doctrines, toleration, and broadmindedness."

ARMY'S RADIO TESTS HEARD HERE

Michael J. Fanning who is in charge of the radio equipment at the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital which he tunes up nightly and receives concerts and lectures for the benefit of other patients, feels proud of the excellence of the radio set and of the enjoyment received. A short time ago Mr. Fanning while listening in heard a number of radio signals that were being transmitted from the U. S. Army Radio Laboratories, of the signal corps at Camp Alfred Vail, at Oceanport, N. J. When the tests were over the transmitter asked by radio that those having received the signals within a wide radius report the receiving of them to the laboratories. Mr. Fanning complied with the request telling of the reception by him of the signals and has since received from Camp Vail the following letter, dated July 20:

Dear Mr. Fanning: We thank you for your kind communication of July 14 reporting good reception at Kingston, New York, of radio signals transmitted by the Radio Laboratories in recent test conducted between ground and plane.

The transmitter used was an airplane transmitter of the constant frequency type using three 50-watt tubes. The receiver used was of the super-heterodyne type, employing Signal Corps type VT-5 (pneumatic) tubes.

We are forwarding you under separate cover copy of Radio Broadcast, July, from which most of the articles transmitted that day were taken.

We hope that you will soon be well and that during your period of convalescence you will enjoy the many and varied radio concerts.

Very truly yours,

HAROLD M. McCLELLAND, Officer in Charge

EVOLVE NEW BREED OF HEN

Fowls Laying Extra Size Eggs Developed in Washington.

Hens' eggs averaging nearly twice the ordinary size are now produced by some queer looking chickens on the ranch of William Stubbins, near Washington, Wash. The type of big egg producers has resulted from the successful crossing of the well-known Leghorn breed with imported fowls from South Manchuria.

A species of hen in north China and Manchuria was reported by the United States consul as capable of laying eggs of which five to six weighed a pound.

The largest American eggs average more than seven to a pound, the ordinary nine and the very common about ten.

PLAN AIDS GERMAN STUDENTS

Self-Supporting Scholars Organize Co-Operative Societies in Schools.

Of the 120,000 students in the universities and high schools of Germany, 60 per cent are earning their own living.

Self-supporting students have organized a society, with about forty branches in German cities, whose purpose is to make the lot of these students easier. This society has organized co-operative buying, to reduce the cost of books and supplies to students, and co-operative measures where meals are much cheaper than in places operated for profit.

Had One Qualification.

Little Joseph, aged five, was greatly puzzled because the goldfish in the aquarium, though very much alive, could make no noise. He spent much time trying to teach them to sing and talk. At last he gave up in despair and was heard to say: "Well, you can't sing and you can't talk, but you sure can swimmy fine."

Dedham of the Scriptures.

Delilah, Biblical character, was the treacherous mistress of Samson, the man of marvellous strength. Desiring to learn wherein Samson's strength lay, the lords of the Philistines bribed Delilah to discover the secret. Loving and trusting her, Samson told Delilah that his strength came from his long, thick hair. While he was asleep Delilah cut off his locks, and he fell into the hands of his enemies.
